This two-hour special follows the search of professional genealogist, Tony Burroughs over three continents, as he seeks to determine the family of Jesus -- who they were, how many there were, and what role they may have played in his life. Burroughs' findings from rare documents, the gospels, historians and archaeologists challenge the traditional belief that Jesus was the single child of Mary and Joseph and provide evidence suggesting Jesus had a vast family network that inspired and supported him from childhood to death, and beyond.

Burroughs taught genealogy at Chicago State University and is the author of "Black Roots: A Beginners Guide to Tracing The African American Family Tree."
